PAINTING.

R. A. B. ENGSTROM respectfully informs the ladies of Philadelphia that the vacation having terminated, he has again commenced his featurction in his new style of Painting in Water Colours, (approved by certificates from Artists of the first respectability in this city, and in New York,) and also in the usual mode, at his rooms, No. 10 South Eighth street, between Sansom and Walsont, where they are tampht by the quarrer or lesson, and convenient heurs.

Numerous specimens of his style may be seen at his rooms, to which he invites the attention of those interested in this useful and pleasing art; or the ladies leaving their address, will be waited on at their readmen with specimens.

These who wish to acquire the art of copying fruit and flowers from an attern, are invited to apply without delay, as the season for this will soon be past.

N. B. Mr. E. wishes to observe that his new style is entirely different from Theorem or Poonah Painting.

A class of gentlemen also attend at a particular hour.

Lessons at a moderate charge will be given in private families and seminaries.

Mr. E. has a collection of American and foreign Minerals, which he will be happy to exhibit to those of his pupils who are fond of the study of Mineralogy.

Imperial families; a circumstance which is probable enough, and which nobody takes the trouble to dispute, any more than the alleged nobility of the Castilian peasantry, or the abeard genealogies of certain great families.

"In a retired street in Pera, (one of the suburbe of Constantinople,) a descendant of the Cantacuzenes followed the humble calling of a butcher; but, in spite of industry and activity, he had great difficulty in asrning a sufficiency to pky his way, and maintain his wife and his only daughter Sophia. The latter had jost entered her fourteenth year, and her growing beauty was the admiration of the whole neighbourhood. "Fate, or, if you please so to call it, Providence, ordained that the poor butcher should suffer repeated losses, which reduced him to a condition bordering on beggary. His wife unfoided her distressed circumstances to a Greek, one of her relations, who was Dragoman to the Franch embassy, and who, in his return, related the her relations, who was Dragoman to the French embassy, and who, in his raturn, related the story to the Marquis de Vauban, the ambassador. This nobleman became interested for the unfortunate family, and especially for Sophia, whom the officious Dragoman described as being likely to fall into the enarce that were laid for her, and to become an innate of the harem of some Pasha, or even of a Turk of inferior rank. Promitted by eith envisaits, or perhaus by some some Pashs, or even of a Turk of inferior rank. Prompted by pity, curiosity, or perhaps by some other motive, the smbassador paid a visit to the distressed family. He saw Sophia, was charmed by her beauty and intelligence, and be propose at that her parents should place her under his care, and allow him to convey her to France. The misery to which the poor people were reducted, may perhaps palliate the shame of acceding to this extraordinary proposition; but, be this as it may, they consented to surrender up their daughter for the sum of 1500 prastree, and Sephia was that same day conducted to the ambassador's palace. She found in the Marquis de Vauban a kind and liberal benefactor. He engaged masters to instruct her in every branch of education; and elegant accomplishments, added to her natural charms, rendered her an object of irrosistible attraction.

The prisoners, on being arraigned, pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Bollians and Mr. Bodkin was economically and Mr. Claransoon were sugaged on behalf of the other prisoner.

Hugh Murray azamined — Was a seaman on board the vessel and the other prisoner was the Master of the vessel and the other prisoner was the Master of the cabin, on the voyage from Batavia to Singapore, for having got drunk; and alterwards he assisted in working on deak, until the vessel arrived at the above place. On arriving there he was ill for seven weeks, but remained on board at the other prisoner.

But, to come to a case more analogous to that of the noble hostess of Holly Lodge, do you remember the history which the Prince de Ligne related at Vienna, of my beautiful and existent friend, the Countess Patocha, whom fortens thought fit to raise from obscurity to high rank and wealth,—I may even any covereign power; for her domains included 80 tewns, Britages, and a population of 800,000 inhabitants, in the fartile prevince of the Utraine."

"Indeed," said the Count ——"the story, if written by his Waher Scott, or ribited with the charm which the Prince de Ligne imparts to every thing he utters, could not but be considered as one of the most entraordinary spineds of the attraordinary age in which it courses.

"The Count has excited our curiosity," said one of our friends, turning to me, "to hear a story with which you are, no doubt, as well acquainted as the Prince de Ligne, since you passed more than a year at the revidence of the Countass, with whom, till the time of her death, you regularly corresponded."

"Such a romance." I replied, "is only interesting in its details. Never told Devereus, the Custom-house officer, that he would have revenge upon the Captain for not paying his wages... Devereus asked him if Bragg was the Captain who killed a black man once.

who killed a black man once.

John Brown was cabin boy on board the Frances Watson. It was his duty to give out the provisions. Received his orders from Bragg, the Master, who told him never to take any provisions to the deceased unless he came for them. If he came he should have given them to him. No particular allowance was set out for him. He might have had as much as he could have eaten. If he came for food it was never denied to him. The reason for the particular order respecting him was, because he would not order respecting him was, because he would ne work on board. His chest was overhauled, an four or five biscuits were found in it. The Mat had nothing to do with ordering provisions.

Cross-examined by Mr. Borkin—The de ased was a stranger to witness when he camboard. When discharged from the cabin for drunkenness, he was put before the mast the others. The opinion of the whole crew was that he was a skulker; and the last witness had expressed himself to that effect. A few days before his death the Captain called the whole crew together, to take their opinion upon whole crew ingether, to take their opinion upon his health. They all thought he was shamming nickness, and could work; Murray said so too. Heard the deceased complain of a pain in his side a week before his death. Whopping him with a birch rod was not calculated to do him any strinus injury. It would not have been used if it were hably to injure him. The first time his chest was searched was in consequence of his being suspected of robbing the crew's stores, chest was overhauled a second time, a small bucket of bread was found. After arriving in England there was a great deal of disentification on the part of the crew for not receiving their wages immediately.

By Mr. Aposputs-It was ten days before bey went before a Magistrate, and the Mate was summoned as a witness; but, after he got to the office, he was put to the bar along with

Mr. CLARKSON said they had the summons of Mr. Ballantyne, the Magastrate, ordering the Mate to attend as a witness. Mate to attend as a witness.

Chief Justice Tynnal said there was no evidence against the Mate.

m Courtney, another of the seamen, do William Courtney, another of the seamen, deposed that, in his opinion, the death of the decreased was caused by ill-treatment, starvation and fingring. Saw him flogged sixteen hours before his death; it was with the capetan bar; he called that flogging. The Captain Lifed the deceased up on the deck with the capetan bar, and let him fall down again. That would, not burt him much, or cause his death. He was three days nithout foud, and whoese heard the Captain refuse to give him any.

Cross-examined—Had been eight years at sea. Never sorted in the Prince George. Sailed with Captain Pather in the Eases. There was no moting in that ship whilst he was in it. But a way from the Eases because he watted to stop out in the centry. When the Captain took the opinion of all the men upon the leadth of the deparated, witness said that, if he get sufficient field he could work. All the crew did not say he was a shulker. Heard Brown retime him find, and sell him to go to the Captain for it.—That was shout seven days he fore he death. Mover heard the deceased refuse from when it was given out. Brown recalled—lismombered the clash being given to the deceased. He came to the Captain and complained of the hearthorn, and wished for a remedy, and the chalk was given to him for that purpose.

James Clark, another of the efew, stated that

The Currer Justice—How did he give the blow? I cannot well explain, but if I had the espetan-bar here I would show you. The de-ceased was standing up at the time, and received three blows of the capetan-bar, which had the effect of throwing him down. Here Chief Justice Tv noat observed to the Ju-ry that there was no evidence whatsever against the Mate, and it seemed to him a very improper thing to have included him in this progneution. The accounts given by the different witnesses were contradictory, and nothing had been proved to warrant the Jury to come to a conclusion that the death of the deceased was caused by that the death of the deceased was caused by the misconduct of the prisoners; on the contrary, the great probability was, that it was produced by the illness with which he was seized at Singapore. With respect to Bragg, the Master, he would examine the rest of the witnesses, if the Jury thought it necessary.

The Jury, without hesitation, capressed themselves perfectly satisfied, and acquirrue both the prisoners, observing that there was not the shadow of evidence against them.

PHILADELPHIAT
THURSDAY EVENING, SEPT. 17, 1838

The New York Evening Post of yes erday contains the following informatio especting Commodore Pourra: - Letters vere received in town yesterday from Dr. Boardman, who is the surgeon, friend, and companion, of Com. Porter, in Mexico, and no mention is made of his (Com. Porter's) srrest, as was stated in the accounts received yesterday from Vera Cruz. They are residing in the family of Mr. Poinsett the American Minister, and their detention results from the embarrassments in the re sources of the Government, which they have every reason to expect will be speedily

About 12 last night, a person resident in Second above Arch street, believed to be partially deranged, left his chamber unpercived, mounted on the roof and made way along the tops of the neighbouring houses until he reached Arch street. He then turned the corner, and proceeded down Arch street in the same manner, for a considerable distance; when arriving at an aller which he found impossible to pass, he slid down the roof till his feet rested in the trough attached to the eaves. In this position was discovered by some members of his family, who had missed him, and had comnenced a search with the assistance of se veral friends. It was not safe to venture out on the roof, which was yet very slippery in consequence of the rain. Two ladders were procured and spliced together, by the aid of which the wanderer was securely brought down.

The New York papers of last evening innounce the Calebonia as below. As this is the LIVERPOOL packet of the first of August, she probably brings no news. Her arrival, however, will no doubt be speedily followed by that of some of the packets that sailed several days later. The COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER, in addition to what we were enabled to give yesterday, supplies some interesting paragraphs from the FRENCH papers, which we subjoin.

pers, which we subjoin.

The tribunal of the correctional police was crowded to excess on the 30th July, to hear the trial and defence of Barthelemy, author of the Villeliad, the Epistle to the Grand Turk, the Peyronneid, Napoleon in Egypt, &c., who had been arrested for a recent publication, entitled Fils de l'Homme, or Recollections of Vienna. It was understood that the poet would deliver his defence in verse. The Fils de l'Homme, it was alleged, contained attacks upon the royal authority, and the right of the Bourbons to the throne, regrets for Bonsparte and his suite, &c. The young poet appeared at the same bar at which Beranger was condemned. Denain the publisher, and David the printer, also appeared before the tribunal. A thousand and eighty copies had been delivered to the former, part intended for publication in Belgium, and part in intended for publication in Belgium, and part is Paris. The printer objected, while the work was in press, to two passages, which Barthelemy did not see fit to alter, but explained by notes. The not see fit to alter, but explained by notes. The king's advocate read to the court the passages objected to as seditious; after which the advocate of the poet observed that his client had some observations to make. The latter accordingly pronounced in verse, without looking on his manuscript, a poem justificatory of the Fils del' Homme, fragments of which are quoted in the Gazette de France, and Constitutionnel, and which was received with murmurs of applause. The advocates for the poet and the booksellers defended them at some length, and after deliberating an hour, the tribunals declared Barthelemy and David guilty of the double crime of attacking the throne, which belonged to the king as his birthright, and of imagining the overthrow of the legitimate dynasty. The former was condemned to be imprisoned for three months, and to pay a line of 1000 france. The latter was fined 25 francs. The booksellers were acquited.

There is nothing positively new or important ceived by this arrival. The Turk is still obstinate, as it would appear from the best acstinate, as it would appear from the best ac-counts; and the Emperor, though he still pro-poses to open the door of negotiation, insists upon the basis of the plan of the convention of Ack-ermann, the freedom of the Black Sea, the bound-ing of Greece by Volo and Arta, and indemnity for the expenses of the war. It is not at all pro-bable that these hard terms will be listened to as yet, with patience by the Porte. A sensible wri-ter in the Constitutionnel, reviewing the past his-tory of the war, considers the Russians as hav-ing gained much more than could be expected, in one campaign and a half, with the serious and in one campaign and a half, with the serious and desperate opposition they have had to encounter. Beyond the Hemus all is subjected to them, and it is only owing to the unavoidable delay in bringing up their reserves, that they have not crossed the Balkan in force. Botween the mountains and the sea there can be but little skirmishing. One great battle would probably decide the issue between the beligerents, and it has been recently proved which has the advantage in the open field.

the Bairam. There were forty-four in continement, and lots were drawn to determine who should be set free. The seven returned to France by the way of Toulon. They reported that the French prisoners were not very badly treated, owing to the attention of the Sardinian Consul and his wife, a lady of singular morit, who is a native of Odessa. They were confined in a building forming part of the Baths of Algiers, and separated altogether from those condemned to punishments. A single court, however, separated them from the Dey's memagirie, and the rearing of some thirty home and tigars troubled their rest at hight. Four small loaves were allowed them by the Dey, daily, but a small sum supplied by the Sardinian Consul, in proportion to the rank of each, enabled them to procure necessaries, provisions being cheep at Algiers. The writer of the latter from which the foregoing particulars are extracted, states that the blockadu of Algiers has been little more than nominal; and that the Sardinian and Nespolitian consuls would have arranged the differences between France and the Dey, had it not been for the English Consul's interference, who desired the latter net to come to terms. This is, however, merely stated as a rumor. nent, and lots were drawn to determine who

The Journal du Havre of the 21st of July gives the following account of a most destructive storm at Bordeaux and its neighbourhood:

A hurricane, which caused great ravages in that city and on the river, was experienced at Bordeaux on the 25th inst. But the greatest assisty was felt for the fate of the communes west of the city, which are unfortunately realised; for, on the same evening, a furious haif storm (the stones of producious size) completely ravaged the communes of Margaux, Cantenax, Sousons, Labards, Macan, Luden, and even as far as Sian, near Blanquefont. The crops have been entirely destroyed. It is also reported that in the neighbourhood of Bazas the same scourge has caused much damage. Beyond Poiteres the storm evertook the courier from Paris; from that place to Covignae, nothing can be seen but the wrecks of trees and houses, the road being completely covered with them. Several wagons were upset in the ditabas, and two horses attached to one of them were killed. In fact, from Cherace to Covignae net a single leaf is left on the vines. In some communes the earth has been turned up by the hail orthuffles, and no traces of vegetation are left; and, horrible to relate, as if the disorder of the elements were not sufficient, during the storm, amidst the lightning which rent the skies, and perhaps by the light thus occasioned, an unfortunate driver of a post chaise was assassinated in the forest of Chevily, between 10 and 11 o'clock at night. Paris, July 30.

On Monday night, at the fets of La Villette, part of a large amphitheatre, containing upwards of 800 spuctators, gave way, and many persons were precipitated to the ground. Fortunately no one was killed, but a great number received contusions, and some bones were broken.

M. Gauchais, formerly a Chef de Bataillon in the French army, was condemned to death on the 14th of December, 1824, as an accomplice in an attack upon the safety of the State. His Majesty subsequently commuted this sentence to imprisonment for twenty years. By an act of clemency, the King has just been pleased to remit so much of the term of imprisonment as remains unexpired, and in consequence M. Gauchais was discharged from prison on the 22d

Gauchais was discussive from process. The Journal des Debats says:—" The arrival of the Prince de Polignac at Paris has revived the rumors for which his presence is always the signal. He has not been more than 24 hours in the capital, and yet 20 administrations have been made and unmade."

The two French Chambers were to close on the lat August.

The French editors disapprove of the conduct of M. Mandeville, their Consul at Buenos Ayres. Says the Journal du Commerce of the 20th:—"Our Consul, whose right to mingle in the affairs of State was denied, protested against the law of the land, and by an unhappy consequence, demanded his passports and retired to Montevideo. This measure was disapproved by the French and other strangers, but least, as it would seem, by the Charge d'Affairs of England, who, to facilitate the departure, became obligated for his debts to the amount of more than 40,000 francs. An obligation readily conferred, since it went to diminish the consideration which the French had acquired among the inhabitants.—
Our government ought to act wisely with this republic; it will find in it employment for its commerce. The inhabitants are favorably disposed towards us; but behold how the maladresse of a consul has turned against us, a circumstance which ought to make us friends. The English, more sagacious, never permit an opportunity to escape of acquiring and preserving the ascendancy every where."

A letter from Bologna, dated 12th July, says that all Jews had been expelled the States of the Church by order of Cardinal Albani.

We learn from Geneva, that a Greek priest, sent to that city by Count Capo d'Istrias, has opened a room for the celebration of divine service after the ritual of the Greek Church. This priest devotes his leisure time to clock and watch making, an employment in which he was already occupied in the isle of Poros. In the canton of Geneva there are at present no fawer than eight different forms of worship, namely:—The Calviniste; the Lutherans; the German Reformed Church; the Church of England; the Methodiste; the Catholics; the Greek; and the Jews.

A grand fete extraordinatre, which will be honored by the presence of the Duchess of Berry, will be given to-morrow evening (30th July) at the Garden of Tivoli, Rue, de Clichy. The preparations are upon a grand and catensive scale. In addition to the numerous divertisements, M. Eugene Robertson, who recently received such unbounded applause in America, will ascend in a baloon 30 feet in diameter, and be accompanied in his ascent by a young lady. Extract of a private letter of the 13th inst. from Lisbon:—"The Intendant-General of the Police, M. Friere de Lima, has just been dismissed from his post. The Nuremberg Gazette gives the following intelligence, under date of Frontiers of Wallachia, July 4—"After the surrender of Siliaria, the Divan of Wallachia received orders to furnish 350 wagons for the transport of the gar-nish sid wagons for the transport of the gar-nison into Russia, and 1000 for the inhabitants, who, according to the conditions of the capitu-lation, were to be conveyed to the Turkish ad-vance outposts. The Nuremburgh Correspondent gives the following under date of Smyrna, June 20— Nothing has been talked of here for the last fortnight, but the refusal of Count Capo d'Istrias to suspend hostilities and raiss the blockade. The persons who accompany Mr. Gordon, have intimated that this refusal may be attended with very serious consequences. This state of affairs, ambhined with the force of research weekler.

The Nuremberg Courier states that the Emperor Nicholas has sent to the Governor of Moldavis and Wallachis the plan of a constitution for the principalities, of which the fallowing are the chief provisions:—1. That the two previnces shall remain under the suscraints of Turkey.—2. That they shall select Hospodars, and that to Russia and Turkey shall belong the right of confirming the election. 2. That the taxes, equally divided, shall be fixed once for all, and that the Hospodars shall not have power to augment them. 4. That a fixed revenue shall be assigned to the Hospodars, in order that they may have no pretext for burdening the country, and all venal charges shall be abolished. A very strong sensation was created in the Block Exchange yesterday afternoon, by an intimation that Mr. Slatford, for a number of years an extensive speculator in the Funds, had committed suicide at his lodgings, in the City Road, having differences to pay which he was incompetent to meet. Not having reached the market as early as usual on a pay day, his friends and creditors began to entertain some suspicion that all was not right, and sent to ascertain the market as early as usual on a pay day, his friends and creditors began to entertain some suspicion that all was not right, and son to ascertain the cause of his absence at his lodgings, when he sent an answer that he had overlept himself, but would attend in the market at twelve o'clock. This, it would seem, was the particular hour when he destroyed himself by a pistol, the ball of which passed through his head. The event was not known at the Stock Exchange until nearly half past two; when Consols for Account, which had been steady at about 89 3-8, dropped to 88 7-8, a number of dealers selling Stock against what they had previously bought, which sould not be delivered by Mr. Slatford.—His differences, however, excepting his private debts, it is understood, do not exceed £100.—Ohronicle, July 26.

The attraction of the FRENCH OPERA was severely tested last evening; but the players and their friends, we think had reaon to be satisfied. A cold rain, which had fallen through almost the whole day, increased most unfortunately about the hour of opening the doors and lasted till some time after the curtain had been raised. The pit was consequently thin; but the boxes resented a very encouraging display of ladies and their attendants, and the scene was not less animated than usual.

As actors, we think that ALEXANDRE and PRIVAT have seldom, if ever, shown themelves to more advantage than as the Count Robert and his friend. The scene, in which each communicates to the other his suppo sed success in the experiment they have conspired to make on the fidelity of their mistresses, is entitled to particular comnendation. The character of Joconde is sketched with admirable delicacy. We cannot but give him credit for sincerity in his longings after the pure enjoyments of retirement; nor refuse to believe that he joins in the schemes of his less sentimental friend more from complaisance than inclination .-When tricked and laughed at by the young villagers, it adds to our enjoyment to per ceive that the "pauvre Joconde" himself is not sorry for the issue of the adventure. Among all the parts in which PRIVAT has won the favours of his audience, he has had none requiring more skill than this; nor do we recollect any in which he has been more densing.

Mars. Miles and Mariage merited and received general approbation as the two court belles. In their disguises, too, they were very successful, and entered with spiit in the humour of the scene. It mus be confessed, however, that the faces which peeped from under their hoods, looked in pite of spectacles, more like the property of two runaway nuns than of a pair of superannuated fortune-tellers. LEBLANC, as their attendant, had little to say; but the propriety of his appearance and demeanour even when his part affords no chance to display his versatile and lively talents, is always entitled to notice.

Jeannette is a charming character and was charmingly personated by MDE. ALEX-ANDRE, who in none of her performances has identified herself more thoroughly with her part than in this beautiful picture of innocence, with just art enough to guard it. DESCHAMPS was a good representative of Lucas.

VICTORIN is an actor of whom we always ike to speak, because we never knew one who had so entirely made his own way in the public favour. At his first appearance last eason, as an elderly gentleman in one of Scribe's vaudevilles, his voice and person were remarked as peculiar. The originality of his action was next noticed; and, before the conclusion of the piece, the effect of his genius was felt through the house. Two or three trials established him as a low comedian of the very first order; and now, we believe, there is but one opinion as to his extraordinary merit. The Baitli is a short part, but a particular notice of his performance would require more space than we can afford. Every passage had its peculiar merit, and told with great effect. Commerce with Gibralian was said to be at a stand; in consequence of the Governor of that town, having thrown difficulties in the way of the blockake of certain ports of Morocco by the Austrians. The French and English merchants had repaired to Cadia.

OUTRAGEOVE CONDECT AND CONTEST or COURT.—Vesterday morning, while the Court of Sessions was engaged in trying the case of McGowan, the Hackman, Mr. Niven, by leave of the public prosecutor, interrupted the proceedings in order to move the Court to discharge John L. Coney from an arrest at the suit of Daniel Palmer. Coney is the witness who was examined on Saturday last in the case of Palmer, when he testified that Palmer had sent him round town to different places in search of a situation, for procuring which Coney had paid Palmer at his INTELLICENCE OPPICE, two dollars. Coney is a witness on two other indictments which are still pending against Palmer, and has been chilged by the District Attorney's subpons to remain in town against his will, for the purpose of being examined at the forthcoming trials. Yesterday morning, coney was a wrested in the Court room, by a Shariff's efficacy on a writ, at the suit of Palmer, for one the purpose of Palmer, or one with at the suit of Palmer, for one of the public proceedings in the Court. To this the District Attorney as well on the purpose of being examined at the officer, on a writ, at the suit of Palmer, for one the publication was made to est aside the arrest, on the ground that Coney was a witness attending on the Court. To this the District Attorney proposed to be a witness at was not to be a witness at the purpose of the court. To this the District Attorney proposed that Palmer be put upon his oath. The Court decided that he must be sworn and that he must be committed to Bridewell until he should be willing to repoat his delearation on oath. The Court decided that he must be sworn and that he must be committed to Bridewell until he should be willing to repoat his delearation on oath. The Court decided that he must be sworn, and repeated on the standithant of the purpose of the first standing on the Court.

The Court immediately ordered the Sheriff to discharge Coney, as it was notorious to a great number of persons present, to the Court, the Lawyers, the Reporters and to others, that Co-ney was attending the Court as a witness.

This cutrageous proceeding excited the feel-ings of every one in the Court room, and drew forth an expression of the utmost indignation from Mr. Hoffman, District Attorney, and from the Court.

good citissens of this state residing in and about Perth Amboy, were kept in a state of actions ment by the depredations of some two or three hundred oystermen (most of them, we believe, from Staten Island) upon the oyster bods opposite that place.

The facts connected with this unpleasant affair, as far as we have been able to ascertain them, are these. Three or four years since, a company of gentlemen residing in New Jercey, obtained permission under an express law of the state, to occupy a certain portion of the waters near the mouth of the river Karitan, for the purpose of planting and raising oyster—and for this privilege they were bound to pay a valuable annuity to the state. Relying upon the protection of the state, the company proceeded to ecopy the ground in the manner contemplated by the set. They have actually expended, we are assured, ten or twelve thousand dollars in the enterprise; and had, one short week sings, fair prespect of speedy and ample remunsar.

In the enterprise; and had, one short week sings, fair prespect of speedy and ample remunsared the most of the state of New York commenced taking up the oysters planted by the company. On the next morning (Wedinseday) they returned with increased mambers, and again commenced their work of plunder. The company, in the mean of the Pace, then sitting in New Jercey, and the said county, under a special writ, to take all persons trespassing on the company's oyater of the said county, under a special writ, to take all persons trespassing on the company's oyater of the said county, under a special writ, to take all persons trespassing on the company of the said county, under a special writ, to take all persons trespassing on the company to the county of Middlesex, or all the sheriff's in New Jercey, and the said company having obtained a four pound guith the opsterment and entireated them to all the options of the peace, then sitting in New Jercey, and the found it so, and on Wedneday morning proceeding the county of the cities of the county of the cin the depreciators. The systemen then becoming alarmed, made off, threatening to burn the town. In this stage of the business information of the situation of affairs was conveyed to the Governor.

On Thursday morning the oystermen appeared with numbers still augmented. They were again warned off, but manifesting no disposition to obey the warning, some boats were manned at Am-boy which succeeded in capturing a sloop and five or six men—the sloop was secured at Am-boy, and two of the men conveyed to New Bronswick hall boy, and two of the men conveyed to Now Brunswick jail.

On Friday and Saturday the oystermen returned to the spoil in great numbers; and the company, being left unprotected by the authority of the state, the militia who were called out having returned to their homes, the whole extensive bed of oysters, worth it is said from twenty to thirty thousand dollars, was surrendered without further effort.

twenty to thirty thousand dollars, was surrendered without further effort.

The occurrence above recorded is a subject of deep regret. We have no disposition to cast the blame upon our New York neighbors indiscriminately; it was unquestionably the work of persons destitute alike of character and responsibility, and we have reason to believe that some Jerseymen were engaged in it. The idea prevails to some extent among our citizens, that the grant of the company was unconstitutional.—We are not of the number of those who hold to this opinion; and we consider it a matter of policy, to prevent the total extinction of this valuable species of fish in our waters, to adopt some measure of the kind.

While the store, the fellow who had dagged him for some time, came in, and began to abuse him, and he was not got rid of until he was put in charge of a watchman. After this the stranger was conducted to his lodgings by his protector, who had been the means of preventing him from being robbed. The miserable being who made this attempt upon a stranger, was only and his connazions are of the first standing, and well known by the gentleman, who, in this instance, no doubt, prevented his committing an act that would have sent him to the state Prison. BILIOUS FEVER.

BILIOUS FEVER.

Hartford County, Md. Sept. 10.—This is a subject which, in many parts of our country as autumn commences, generally assumes a fearful importance; and the gloomy predictions of physicians, and other wise ones, have already gone forth that the present season will be unusually prolifie in generating that fatal malady. In accordance with these forebodings, the Bilious Fever has already made its appearance in several parts of this country in a very threatening form. The writer of these brief remarks, offers them from this sole motive—to farnish a safe guard against this calamity to those who choose to put it in practice.

The defence aganist this evil, consists in countracting the cause. Medical men almost universally agree in assigning as the cause of this fever, the Marsh Miasma, or the efflueix arising from decaying vegetables;—this opinion the

During the thunder storm which passed over the town of Richmond, on the morning of the 31st August, the house of Mr. John Adams was struck by lightning, and one of his daughters, aged 13, instantly killed. Her two sisters were sleeping with her in the same bed, one aged 18, and the other 5 years. The bed was set on fire by the electric fluid, and the elder daughter so severely burnt, that she survived but five days—the younger one was not so seriously injured.

The first branch followed the ridge of the house and passed off at the west end, in a horizontal direction, and struck the barn 10 rods distant, and descended to the earth, but the fire was so far spent that it did not leave a spark. Another branch left the chimney, after it had descended about 10 feet, and apparently struck the feet of the daughter who was killed, who lay on the front side of the bed, and after passing to her head, fell on the floor, and broke them there of the beards and then beard out then beard out. lown three of the boards, and then passed o at the eaves of the house, flinging up the feet of

THE opportunity afforded by the winter mounts, has combined the advectior to repleasish his wars floren, anticipating, as small, at the opening season, as indian of demand for the article in which he is happy to eap his memers in the precinity to perfectled has exceeded his most suggisted expectation. The ready sale of those improved Piane Fortes is, and has been, a most satisfactory test of this fact, and it is a seatter of no small moment to offer again his undergoed theads, for the almost suspensibled encouragement with which hashes been ma, by his friends of the Country as well as the City.

In these tendering his grateful regards to his fellow citizens and patrons generally, he avails hissaelf of the opportunity of offering an entire new assortment of the heat productions from his Manufactory, which certainly will assort no repeat reconstructions from his Manufactory, which certainly will assort no repeat the street in instruments can espeak purely and firmly for themselves.

The expenses of this cotabilishment being perhaps less than any other in the city, he feels encouraged to siny that constry merchants who may be venders or have ordered, will further their interest in the two fold view of judicious and peruniary advantage in giving him a call.
